EAT & DISCOVER ALGAE

July, 2025

The AlgaeFood project is a 3-year Interreg Deutschland-Danmark project promoting the consumption of European algae in Northern Germany and Southern Denmark.

ACHIEVEMENTS SO FAR:

The AlgaeFood partners have made significant progress during the first half of the project. A podcast series, a project website, algae recipes, network events, cooking workshops and demonstrations to schools and businesses as well as a project brochure to boot! The project is now in full swing, with many workshops and events planned over the summer, including the development of teaching materials for schools so that algae can be taught in classrooms in both Germany and Denmark. The logic is that by showing kids how to use algae in the kitchen, they will go home and convince their parents and grandparents to try something new. There are also more podcast episodes in Danish in the making, which will result in "AlgenTalk" podcast being a tri-lingual podcast!

COMING UP:

Other activities in the pipeline include a new version of the project brochure, as well as a separate brochure specifically about the ecosystem benefits provided by algae. The partners will also put up information boards in public spaces about the project in the border regions of both Germany and Denmark. The website will be continuously updated with event reports and new algae recipes, as well as the teaching materials, once available. The partners also support the establishment of Germany's first public sea garden in Flensburg, hopefully the first of many. Follow the project on Instagram or LinkedIn to stay updated with the latest activities, including registration for small events.

EVENTS TO WATCH OUT FOR:

- Tag am Kai 14. September 2025, Kiel
- Nordic Seaweed Conference 08.-09. October 2025, Kystvej
- ... and many more!
